

Is that really the challenge? If no, why?

Yes, there are lots of stakeholders involved and (very) little coordination.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
i agree, it's a big challenge	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
I agree that it is indeed a challenge.	<input type="radio"/>
Yes, it is	<input type="radio"/>
é desafio.	<input type="radio"/>
objetivos e atividades comuns, criação de rede de comunicação e suporte, partilha de dados	<input type="radio"/>

What makes it a challenge?

There are lots of very small initiatives, also because the healthcare "world" is very complex and multi-faceted	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
Priorities are different and sometimes conflicting, a challenge is to try to build common objectives	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
In my opinion, setting up cooperation between local stakeholders and the regional ecosystems is the first step. Enabling an environment for this cooperation to become a self-sustaining system is the real challenge.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
necessário criar plataformas comuns de comunicação e atuação	<input type="radio"/>

What is the context behind the challenge?

There are many opportunities we as local organisations would like to get involved in, but we might not have the resources (time, money, staff...) if we need to keep overseeing our previous projects. For that reason, an automated, self-sustaining ecosystem is very important.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
There are not share data, lack of resources, asymmetrical relationship public/private sector	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
there are still too many "silos" to be broken	<input type="radio"/>
existência de bases de dados e aplicativos que não têm interface entre si. Necessidade de articulação na política de saúde e interinstituições	<input type="radio"/>

Can you make it more concrete?

Concepts like "stakeholders" or "regional ecosystems" need to be broken down to something much more concrete: who? which groups? It cannot be everybody, we should prioritize and start from somewhere.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
Formação/aperfeiçoamento de competências	<input type="radio"/>
boa compreensão, partilha e avaliação do impacto das atividades nos ecossistemas regionais	<input type="radio"/>
identificação clara da participação de cada parte interessada local e dos processos subjacentes nas metas/objetivos a atingir, métodos de avaliação das estruturas, processos e resultados	<input type="radio"/>
In my organisation, we provide free therapy to children with a migration background suffering from a variety of issues. We involve the schools and the families in our interventions to inform them of their needs and offer solutions. Schools that we work with end up being informed on these issues and how they might approach them and we receive fewer and fewer calls from the same schools and can focus our attention on other regions, neighbourhoods etc.	<input type="radio"/>
